ABSTRACT

In order to determine the information services provided by state information agencies, a telephone survey was conducted with representatives from 50 state agencies, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico. The survey solicited data regarding: (1) the comprehensiveness of each agency's Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) microfiche collection, (2) whether or not manual and/or computer searches of the ERIC document base were provided, (3) the availability of microfiche readers and related equipment, (4) accessibility to the public of each agency's library collection, and (5) availability of ERIC microfiche and hard copy reproduction. Included in this compilation are the results of the survey, along with information profiles containing a listing by state of microfiche collection locations, computer software installations, and the names and address of the directors and service provided by selected state information dissemination agencies. MISSION OF THE CENTER

The Center for Vocational and Technical Education is an independent unit on The Ohio State University campus. It serves a catalytic role in establishing consortia to focus on relevant problems in vocational and technical education. The Center is comprehensive in its commitment and responsibility, multidisciplinary in its approach and interinstitutional in its program.

The Center's mission is to strengthen the capacity of state educational systems to provide effective occupational education programs consistent with individual needs and manpower requirements by:

- Conducting research and development to fill voids in existing knowledge and to develop methods for applying knowledge.
- Programmatic focus on state leadership development, vocational teacher education, curriculum, vocational choice and adjustment.
- Stimulating and strengthening the capacity of other agencies and institutions to create durable solutions to significant problems.
- Providing a national information storage, retrieval and di semination system for vocational and technical education through the affiliated ERIC Clearinghouse.

The material in this publication was prepared pursuant to a contract with the National Institute of Education, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Contractors undertaking such projects under government sponsorship are encouraged to express freely their judgment in professional and technical matters. Points of view or opinions do not, therefore, necessarily represent official National Institute of Education position or policy.

FOREWORD

Increasing demand for information by vocational and technical educators emphasizes the important role of state information dissemination agencies in providing the interpersonal linkage between information collections and users. It is important that vocational and technical educators have access to their state information agency and are aware of the services it can provide.

The Center has cooperated with state research coordination units (RCU's) for several years in a series of activities aimed at stimulating the development of state information dissemination systems for vocational and technical education. Following a conference in 1967, an ad hoc committee of RCU personnel worked with Center staff to develop a Guide for State Vocational-Technical Education Information Dissemination Systems. Seven RCU's cooperated in a study of over 3,200 information users, and in planning and conducting two training workshops for information specialists. Concurrently, many RCU's were developing information resources and the capacity to serve the needs of information users. To assess the status of information resources and services in each state, the data contained within this report were collected. It is hoped that the compilation will prove useful to RCU directors and others in extending and refining resources and services. The data affirm the excellent service being rendered by a majority of RCU's.

This compilation of state information resources profiles identifies the names and addresses of selected state information dissemination agencies, lists the locations of ERIC microfiche collections, as well as the availability of computer software installations for searching ERIC files in each state. Individual information resources profiles should be valuable to users seeking sources of information on vocational and technical education within their state.

This report was prepared by David H. Miller, User Services, The Center for Vocational and Technical Education. Special recognition is given to James M. Smiley of The Center staff for his many contacts with state information dissemination agencies in securing this information and to the directors and staff of the state information dissemination agencies for their willing cooperation.

Guide to State Information Resources

One of the essential components of an information system is a mechanism for moving contact and services as close to the user as possible. The Center for Vocational and Technical Education and its affiliated ERIC Clearinghouse on Vocational and Technical Education provide service upon request to users in two ways within the framework of The Center's User Services Unit: by means of direct response (telephone, letter, in-person) and by referral of requests to agencies that can best serve the requestors' needs.

State Research Coordinating Units for Vocational and Technical Education (RCU's) and the ERIC Clearinghouse on Vocational and Technical Education have cooperated in providing ERIC users with access to both general and specific types of information to solve their problems.

Cooperation Between VT-ERIC and RCU's in Providing User Services

Personnel at The Center have, in the past, solicited the assistance of RCU's or other state information dissemination agencies in responding to requests that required one or more of the following: in-depth follow-up to formulate a search strategy, information on availability of data not readily identifiable through ERIC, information on accessibility to state and local collections of ERIC microfiche and duplication services.

Development of Information Resource Profiles

In order to make the referral of requests to state information agencies more realistic, a telephone survey of agencies was conducted during October and November of 1972 to ascertain the information services provided by these agencies. The results of this telephone survey, along with a listing by state of computer software installations and ERIC microfiche collections, were compiled to form a Guide to State Information Resources. The Guide is intended for use by user services personnel in referring requestors to specific information resources in a given state. When this procedure is followed, only the profile for a single state is used. State information dissemination personnel can use the compilation of profiles for comparison purposes and to gain insight into the different approaches taken by various states in providing information services to users. These agencies can also disseminate copies of their state's profile to information requestors within their state.

Survey of State Information Agencies

The survey solicited data regarding the comprehensiveness of of each agency's ERIC microfiche collection, whether or not manual and/or computer searches of the ERIC document base were provided, the availability of microfiche readers and related equipment and accessability to the public of each agency's library collection. The following table reflects the numbers and percentages of the 50 state agencies (plus Puerto Rico and Washington, D.C.) that provide these eight specific information services. The Guide to State Information Resources is available from the User Services Specialist, The Center for Vocational and Technical Education, 1960 Kenny Road, Columbus, Ohio 43210.
